

Banjoski Music Unveils New Orleans Based Media Music Production House

- Company will provide music licensing and creation services for commercial applications -

New Orleans, LA - March 23, 2005 - Banjoski Music, (www.banjoski.com) a leading provider of special event entertainment in New Orleans, today announced that its new Media Music Division was contracted by MTV Productions to provide music for its Wildboyz program. This builds upon the recent demand for Banjoski's Media Music Division from advertising agencies and film and television producers from around the country.

The Media Music Division provides music and music licensing services for films, television, commercials, and all other forms of commercial media. Banjoski Music is a full scale media music production house offering services such as composing/scoring, licensing & clearance, music supervision, music consulting, music publishing, sound design, sound logos, and a music library.

"Until now, Louisiana had been missing the link between local music and musicians and the film and television commercial directors/producers that wanted to feature them," explained David Bandrowski, founder and creative director of Banjoski Music. "with Banjoski Music, the crucial link is in place to support both our artists and our growing film and marketing industry."

Banjoski Music provides a crucial piece of infrastructure for the Louisiana music industry by providing filmmakers, producers, and advertisers with a place to write, record, and license music for their production within Louisiana, using Louisiana artists. Banjoski Music employs three time winner of Offbeat Magazine's Best of the Beat Award Tim Stambaugh as sound designer/engineer, three time Gambit Readers Poll winning DJ Andrew Mills as electronic composer, nationally recognized songwriter Alex McMurray, and award winning composer James Walsh.

Banjoski Music is a leading music production company in Louisiana, providing music and musicians for films, television, commercials, and special events. For sound bites and more information on how to customize your music experience for your production, go to www.banjoski.com.
